BIG SECTORS SLIP ON THEIR GOALS

Asset monetisation at a slow pace

PRASANTA SAHU
New Delhi, January 8

AFTER ACHIEVING THE target for the first year rather comfortably, the Centre's ambitious National Monetisation Pipeline (NMP) may miss the goal in FY23 by a wide margin as the railways, telecom and petroleum sector slip on their goals.

As against the FY23 NMP target to generate ₹1.62 trillion in revenues and investments, officials indicated that the shortfall could be about ₹50,000 crore. Railways, which is the biggest component of the ₹6 trillion NMP in the four years through FY25, telecom and petroleum sectors are seen the worst performers while mining would be doing the heavy lifting for the second consecutive year. "With the end-of-the-year position not looking good, the railways' target has been reduced to about ₹30,000 crore for FY23 from ₹57,222 crore while the target for 'coal and other mining' have been increased to about ₹37,500 crore from ₹6,060 crore," an official told FE.

Coal and other mining had yielded upfront revenues and capex to the tune of ₹58,000 crore in FY22 against the target of ₹3,394 crore. In FY23 also, the actual achievement of the coal and other mines monetisation by way of revenues in upfront premium, annual royalties and investment by private players are expected to be higher than the revised target. Finance minister Nirmala Sitharaman has asked officers to find out from different ministries how much they would achieve and whether the shortfalls would cover next year or not and the reasons for not meeting targets. Last year, a sum of about ₹1 trillion was raised through the monetisation route as against the target of ₹88,200 crore thanks to mining sector.

Railways collected just ₹800 crore via monetisation through redevelopment of one railway station and some railway colonies in the last fiscal year as against the target of ₹17,810 crore. According to the NMP, railways need to monetise 120 stations, 30 trains and 1,400 km track, among others in FY23. But, it has achieved little so far.

As against the target of ₹20,180 crore, the department of telecom has not been able to monetise any of the telecom assets so far and doubts have emerged if it could achieve anything. The original plan was to mobilise ₹15,780 crore by inviting private investors to bid for Bharat Broadband Network & #8217; ₹300,000 km of optical fibre networks to upgrade, operate and maintain across the country, including states.

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, January 8

HE DROPPED OUT of formal education at the age of 16 in 1978 to take a train to Mumbai to try his luck and three years later made his first killing -- a Rs 10,000 commission doing a diamond trade with a Japanese buyer. That marked the beginning of the entrepreneurial journey of Gautam Adani, now Asia's richest man. He, however, regrets not finishing college, saying early experiences made him wise but formal education rapidly expands one's knowledge.

Speaking at the 75th year celebrations of Vidya Mandir Trust Palampur in Gujarat, Adani recounted his phenomenal journey that has made his group the world's largest solar power company, largest airport and sea port operator in India, nation's largest integrated energy player, country's second largest cement manufacturer and a conglomerate with market capitalisation of over USD 225 billion -- all in a span of four-and-a-half decades.

While the dry and tough living conditions of Gujarat's Banaskantha shaped his social behaviour, his father's involvement in what is now known as 'forward trades' gave him the initial learning. After leaving Banaskantha, Adani moved to Ahmedabad where he spent 4 years completing secondary education. "I was just 16 years old when I chose to give up my education and move to Mumbai," he said.

"In this context, a question I often get asked is - why did I move to Mumbai and not work with my family? As many youngsters in the audience would agree, the optimism and desire for independence of a teenage boy is hard to contain. All I knew was that - I wanted to do something different - and do it on my own." He bought a train ticket and boarded the Gujarat Mail to Mumbai with not much in his pocket.

"Once in Mumbai, my cousin Prakashbhai Desai enrolled me at Mahendra brothers, where I started to learn to assort diamonds. I quickly picked up the business and after working at Mahendra brothers for about 3 years, I left to start my own brokerage in diamond trading at Zaveri Bazar," he said. "I still recall the day I did my first trade with a Japanese buyer. I made a commission of ₹10,000."

"Another question I often get is if I have any regrets that I did not go to college. Reflecting on my life and the different turns it took, I - now - do believe that I would have benefitted if I had finished college. While my early experiences made me wise, I now realize that formal education rapidly expands one's knowledge," said Adani, who largely spoke in Gujarati, with a sprinkling of English.

"To acquire wisdom, one must experience but to acquire knowledge, one must study," he added. These, he said, are complementary. "And although I will never really know, I do reflect at times that the expansion in my abilities may have been faster had I gone to college." Adani, 60, started off as a trader and has been on a rapid diversification spree, expanding an empire centered on ports and coal mining to include airports, data centers and cement as well as green energy.

"First-generation entrepreneurs mostly start with a unique advantage - the advantage of having nothing to lose. This belief is their strength. In my own mind, this was liberating. I had no legacy to follow but I had the opportunity to create a legacy."

"I had nothing to prove to anybody - but had an opportunity to prove to my own self that I could rise. I had nothing to risk by jumping into uncharted waters. I had no expectations to fulfil except those of my own. These beliefs became a part of me," he said. Adani said when he turned 19, he was called back by his elder brother Mahasukhbhai to help run a small-scale PVC film factory the family had acquired at Ahmedabad.
